

OCT 10 1955

Agency 3-1

Sanitized - Approved For Release : CIA-RDP70-00058R000100020086-4
PHILADELPHIA INQUIRERCirc.: m. 647,807
S. 1,146,321Front Edit Other
Page Page Page

Date OCT 10 1955

Red Subversion Held Unchanged

*Special to The Inquirer and
New York Herald Tribune*

BUFFALO, Oct. 9.—There is "not a bit" of difference between the way the Russians are now operating, with regard to intelligence and subversion, and their activities before their friendly approach to the West at Geneva, Allen W. Dulles, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, said today.

And ~~United States~~ intelligence activities overseas, as well as at home under the FBI, are second to none in the free world, Dulles, brother of the Secretary of State, said in a televised interview.

EVALUATION CRITICIZED

Soviet collection of data is good, through subversives as well as intelligence agents, Dulles said, but Russian analysis and evaluation "is probably not so good."

"The Soviets, sitting behind the Iron Curtain, have been able to put up barriers that make it almost more difficult today to get intelligence from the Soviet Union than it was during the war to get intelligence on Germany," Dulles said. "Of course, during time of war all inhibitions are off, and you go hell-bent to get any intelligence you can. You have to be a little more discreet, a little more careful, in times of peace."

Asked how he assessed talk about Soviet relaxation of tensions since the Geneva conference, Dulles replied.

"Looking at the hard evidence that we have, 'I don't see that we have any real reason to believe that certainly in the covert field and the field of subversion there has been any relaxation whatsoever. Its up to the Secretary of State and others to judge the broad political field, but as I look at it, the question is are they stopping any of their subversive activities in Indochina, in Indonesia and the various parts of the world where they're particularly trying to operate, and in parts of Europe?' No, I don't think they are. I don't see any change whatever."

COPYRIGHT